Chicago enjoys ideal Marathon weather

Chicago Tribune

Watching her sister-in-law jog across the Columbus Drive bridge at the start of the Chicago Marathon on Sunday morning was a bitsweet moment for Andrea Wilde.

The Minneapolis woman was supposed to be running too, but instead she stood on the sidelines, an orthotic boot on her left leg.

"Now I have to run it next year. I can't not," said Wilde, 31, who tore a calf muscle nine weeks ago while training for the 26.2-mile race.

As she and thousands of other spectators cheered on friends and family from the sidelines, Wilde remarked that seeing all kinds of runners—first-timers, elite athletes, senior citizens and those with physical disabilities—was inspiring.

"This is probably the coolest thing I've seen in a long time," Wilde said. "Everybody's just cheering each other on."

More than 41,000 participants started the race, leaving in waves beginning at 7:20 a.m. At 2:45 p.m., about 3,000 still were making their way toward the finish line, Executive Race Director Carey Pinkowski said at an afternoon news conference.

The day offered "almost ideal conditions for runners," and the number of injured taken to local hospitals, 24, was lower than in past years, said George Chiampas, medical director for the race. Two of those taken to the hospital required resuscitation efforts en route, he said.

At about the 7-mile mark, a fellow runner performed CPR on a 29-year-old man who was later transferred to Illinois Masonic Medical Center, where he was in stable condition Sunday afternoon, Chiampas said. A 59-year-old man who required CPR near 13th Street and Michigan Avenue was in critical condition at Mercy Hospital, Chiampas said.

More than 800 runners required medical care either along the route or at the finish line.

For thousands of runners, the cool and bright fall morning was a memorable one. Ariel Salazar, 32, said he felt great after posting a personal record of 4 hours, 12 minutes and 51 seconds.

"It's one of those things that I never thought I'd be able to do in my life," said Salazar, of St. Charles, who was running his third marathon with his wife. "It's a beautiful day for a race. And I just think this city is freaking awesome."

For many spectators, the day was about celebrating and encouraging the long-distance runners even if they didn't know any of them personally.

Angel Stech, 33, who lives in Lakeview, drove with her husband and two children to Little Italy to stake out a spot where Stech knew her voice would be most appreciated.

Waving a pink cowbell and neon pink sign, Stech called out runners' numbers as they approached the 18-mile mark. She said she chose the stretch between the 17- and 18-mile marks because that can be the most challenging point in a race.

"Way to go, 766! One-eighty-two, you're looking great!" she cheered.

A marathon runner herself, Stech said she sat this one out but couldn't stay home knowing that there were others who were pushing their limits and could use some support.

"I know what it's like to be out there," Stech said. "When I run, I always enjoy the spectators. That little encouragement from a stranger, it really does help you."

Ken Regan, 35, was among a group of people who handed out shots of beer, a 15-year tradition that brings a festive element, he said.

"The best part is the smiles," Regan said. "Even if they're not going to take [the beer], they still smile and that's great."

Regan, who lives in Humboldt Park, said he brought 60 beers for the occasion. The beer was starting to run out about three and a half hours into the race.

"You find that pack of people who are not too serious [about the race], and it starts flying off the table," Regan said.

The coolest places are hiding in plain sight

Annie Reed

» @annie_e_313

One year ago on a brisk, sunny October afternoon, I boarded the No. 82 bus in Logan Square and headed south on Kimball to an unknown destination. Eventually, it pulled up in front of a tall, brick tower that rose nakedly above the surrounding neighborhood. I could just make out the words etched into the top of the building's facade: "Sears, Roebuck And Co."

"This is our stop" said my girlfriend, pulling me off the bus. She had promised me a "surprise adventure," and so far it had been intriguing. When moments later I was ordered to sign a waiver in exchange for an elevator ride to the top of the original Sears Tower, I officially was impressed. "The observation deck hasn't been open in years," a volunteer said. "They're doing construction up there, so be careful."

Exiting the elevator at the top, I stepped into an echo-y white-washed room. The room was square, with three floor-to-ceiling windows lining each wall and an outdoor wrap-around observation deck showcasing spectacular, unobstructed views of Chicago in every direction. At the center of the room, a string duet played an ethereal arrangement for a tiny crowd, while pigeons fluttered occasionally from the rafters above.

Finally, I had found my beach. Corona Light poured from the sky.

This type of magical moment (the Corona part was a lie) is what I have come to expect from Open House Chicago, an event as unique as the architectural gems and hidden treasures it showcases. The tagline for this year's event, held Saturday and Sunday, basically says it all: "150 cool places. 48 hours. Go."

What you make of the 48 hours is up to you, but whether you are an architecture buff, an urban explorer or just a Chicagoan with a penchant for sweet rooftop views, I guarantee you'll find at least one building to take your breath away. There are sites in 18 Chicago neighborhoods, so explore your own or get to know another—you've got no good reason not to, because did I mention it's all free?

To plan your itinerary, start with openhousechicago.org for a full list of participating sites, and be sure to check out the "Behind the Scenes Access" available at each building. Some important tips:

» Don't waste your time with buildings that normally are open to the public, as beautiful as they might be. The crown-jewel of OHC is the rare access to members-only rooftops, whimsical work places and secretive hotel penthouses not normally accessible to everyday Chicagoans.

» If you are an aficionado of rooftop decks or spectacular views in general, (the Signature Room does get old eventually), check out sites like MDA City Apartments and Lake Point Tower, most of which are only accessible during OHC, or by paying $1 million a month to live there.

» For bargain hunters, several OHC sites that are free this weekend normally charge admission. The biggie on this list is the Robie House, the renowned Frank Lloyd Wright home in Hyde Park that normally costs $17 for a walk-through. Alternately, the International Museum of Surgical Science is located in a gorgeous Gold Coast mansion that normally is $15 to enter.

A pretty famous Chicago architect once said, "Make no little plans." I strongly recommend you make big plans to hit up OHC.

FEW FLARE-UPS IN ST. LOUIS

At least 17 arrested during Ferguson October, but most protests peaceful

From news services

Riot-gear clad police arrested at least 17 people early Sunday after they refused orders to disperse from a spontaneous sit-in outside a QuikTrip convenience store in St. Louis during a weekend of otherwise peaceful protests against police violence.

Thousands of people were staging protest marches, vigils and other demonstrations in the St. Louis area over the “Ferguson October” weekend, calling for the arrest of a white police officer who shot dead unarmed black teenager Michael Brown in August.

Another fatal shooting of an African-American teenager by an off-duty cop Oct. 8 has further inflamed tensions. Sunday’s arrests were in the same neighborhood where 18-year-old Vonderrit Myers Jr. was shot and killed by an off-duty St. Louis city police officer who was working a private security job for a local neighborhood. Police said Myers shot at the officer three times first, but representatives for Myers’ family have insisted he was unarmed.

St. Louis police spokeswoman Schron Jackson said 17 people had been arrested for unlawful assembly early Sunday at the QuikTrip’s parking lot. Mervyn Marciano, who is handling media relations for a group that provides jail support for protesters, said at least 19 people had been arrested.

The QuikTrip was a notable choice for the demonstrators; rioters looted and burned down a QuikTrip in Ferguson the day after Brown’s death, and the empty convenience store parking lot became a gathering point for the ensuing protests that gripped the city.

“Something changes when they get to the QuikTrip,” St. Louis Metropolitan Police

This isn’t going to stop until there is change with police and black youth.”

—Tory Russell, a founder of Hands Up United

Chief Sam Dotson said Sunday. “One of the clerks told me people with masks were pulling on the door trying to get in. You can imagine, if you’re a QuikTrip employee [who knows what happened in Ferguson], you’re probably pretty scared.”

At that point, Dotson said—citing about 50 protesters blocking business and then sitting down and locking arms outside the store, cheering—police in riot gear cleared the demonstrators from the QuikTrip parking lot, pepper-spraying perhaps four to six people.

Officers gave the sitting demonstrators a last chance to leave without arrest, Dotson said, and many left. But 17 stayed and were arrested for failing to disperse. After clearing the parking lot, Dotson said someone threw a rock that hit one of his officers, although the officer wasn’t hurt.

Dotson said his department is trying to take a relaxed approach to crowd control, in contrast to the strict and sometimes overwhelming displays of police force that came to define the early weeks of protest in Ferguson.

Demonstrators protest Saturday outside the police department (top and left) in Ferguson, Mo. Earlier Saturday, protesters march in a rally in St. Louis (right) as part of a weekend of demonstrations in response to the Aug. 9 shooting of Michael Brown in Ferguson. GETTY IMAGES, REUTERS

"Everybody has the right to be heard. That's what the First Amendment is," Dotson said, adding, "I'll do everything I can to support these events, but the takeover of a QuikTrip is not something I can support."

Ninety-nine percent of the demonstrators are peaceful, Dotson said. "But there are these agitators who work in the background and try to get the crowd to act up."

With a grand jury's decision expected in November over whether to indict Darren Wilson, the Ferguson officer who shot and killed Michael Brown, Dotson said his agency is preparing for unrest in St. Louis, but he hoped for cooler heads to prevail.

"Ferguson is writing a narrative for St. Louis, for the country, and that narrative isn't done yet," Dotson said.

There were no reports of arrests at protest rallies Saturday that drew thousands of people. The police have largely adopted a non-confrontational stance and protest organizers work to maintain order and a non-violent approach.

Brown's mother walked at the front of a rally Saturday evening in Ferguson. Lesley McSpadden, who has criticized Ferguson police, only rarely has participated in protests. She eventually left the group, which grew to more than 1,000 people and moved on to Ferguson police headquarters.

Earlier Saturday, thousands of protesters in downtown St. Louis rallied at a plaza, where organizers included Hands Up United, an activist group that emerged after Brown's death.

Union members, gay rights activists and people from the Occupy movement joined in. "This isn't going to stop until there is change with police and black youth," said Tory Russell, a founder of Hands Up United.

Chicagoans join protests against police brutality post-Ferguson

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

ST. LOUIS Paris Jackson shuffled onto the bus in Bronzeville before dawn Saturday, pulled her denim jacket tight around her and then slept most of the 300-mile trip to St. Louis.

As her fellow passengers chatted about the planned anti-police brutality rally at their destination, Jackson, 23, stayed quiet—until she began to share her own experiences with Chicago police.

They target her and her friends because they are black, she said, like the bouncers at Boystown clubs who won't let them in. She and her friends tell story after story of police targeting them on sidewalks late at night while ignoring groups of white loiterers; police roughing them up for nothing but a dirty look, police slamming one girl so hard against the ground that, years later, she still has back problems. Among friends, they call police the "CPDK"—Chicago Police Department Killers.

"They expect you to fall at their feet," said Lonzo Ward, 25. "You're just an officer. You're not God."

And so, on the spur of the moment, Jackson got on the bus to St. Louis to send a message: "Y'all not going to kill me. I'm not going to be the next Michael Brown."

Jackson was on one of the buses the AFL-CIO sponsored for Chicagoans who wanted to participate in a march during Ferguson October, a four-day "weekend of resistance" to protest police brutality and commemorate the two months since Michael Brown was killed.

Brown's death at the hands of police in the St. Louis suburb of Ferguson sparked days of protest, occasionally violent, and the use of tear gas and rubber bullets by police drew attention across the country.

"I really cannot tell you what made this particular incident [resonate]," said Jeffrey Baker, 42, an Auburn Gresham community activist planning to run for 21st Ward alderman. "I have heard this story a thousand times. ... We have a horrible, horrible relationship between the community and the police."

Other Chicagoans at the St. Louis rally characterized that relationship as dysfunctional at best and toxic at worst.

"I have two little brothers and countless male cousins," said Khalisha Pullen, 22, who grew up in West Garfield Park. "The police antagonize us all of the time. They see us as all criminals."

Representatives from the Chicago Police Department were not immediately available for comment.

The group from the AFL-CIO buses donned yellow T-shirts and joined the march with about 3,000 people from around the country. (Organizers had expected at least double that.)

After the march through downtown St. Louis ended in Kiener Plaza, the Chicago group dispersed among the crowd of anti-violence activists, clergy members, labor unionists, self-proclaimed socialists, advocates for Palestine, anti-Wal-Mart protesters, "V for Vendetta" Guy Fawkes mask-wearers, college students, senior citizens and small children.

The afternoon rally was peaceful, with a handful of police—in regular uniforms, rather than the riot gear Ferguson made famous—hanging around the fringes.

"I felt so empowered," said Diamond A. Whaley, a 20-year-old Austin resident. "I didn't feel alone. ... I felt that it was my responsibility to stand up and be part of the movement in my generation, no matter how afraid I am of being seen."

A few hours later, the Chicago contingent regrouped and talked about why their city hasn't seen the kind of activism that Ferguson has fostered.

Perhaps it's because incidences of police violence in Chicago are underreported, said Olivia Perlow, an assistant professor of sociology at Northeastern Illinois University who marched Saturday.

"Maybe Ferguson is unique in their organizing strategies," she said. "Chicago is very divided. Spatially, we're segregated. We're divided by class, we're absolutely divided racially."

Or maybe it's a matter of temperament, said Sean Porter, 21.

"The people [in St. Louis were] really calm," he said on the bus back to Chicago on Saturday afternoon. "Chicago, they're uptight. They're bangy."

"Bangy means wild," volunteered his friend, Paris Jackson.

Hours later, late Saturday night, Jackson practically jumped out of her seat in excitement when the Willis Tower came into view.

"Chicago, baby! I see her!" she said. "Yes, I love her."

Police chase, fatally shoot man

Officers responding to South Side shots fired call

Chicago Tribune

A 26-year-old man was shot to death by a police officer who was responding to a call of shots fired on the South Side early Sunday morning, authorities said.

The man was pronounced dead at the University of Chicago Medical Center after he was shot by the police officer around 12:35 a.m., according to police and the Cook County medical examiner's office. He was not identified by officials.

When police officers came to the scene in the 5300 block of South Martin Luther King Drive in Washington Park, they saw a man who fit the description of the offender, according to a preliminary statement from Chicago Police Department's Office of News Affairs. Once the officer came up to him, the man fled on foot.

"A foot pursuit ensued during which time the offender pointed his weapon in the direction of the pursuing officers," according to the statement. "As a result of this action, an officer discharged his weapon striking the offender."

Police officers and detectives investigate the scene of a fatal shooting.

None of the police officers reported any injuries as a result of the incident, according to the statement.

The man's weapon was recovered at the crime scene, said Pat Camden, spokesman for the Fraternal Order of Police.

Neighbors came out of their homes onto King Drive to see what happened. A portion of the street, lined with red-brick apartment buildings on the west side and with Washington Park to the east, was blocked off with yellow and red police tape.

Shemika Hodges, 26, who grew up in a public housing project in the city, said she moved to Washington Park from Hyde Park about a month ago.

"I want it to stop," Hodges said of the violence in the city. "But it's not."

Sunday shootings in Chicago leave 1 dead, 4 wounded

Chicago Tribune

A man was shot to death in Belmont Cragin on Sunday, among at least five people wounded in shootings in Chicago.

At about 6:45 p.m., a 25-year-old man was shot while on his front porch in the 2300 block of North Melvina Avenue, said Police News Affairs Officer Thomas Sweeney.

He was taken to Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood, where he was initially in serious condition, but was later pronounced dead, according to police.

Earlier, a 17-year-old was shot about 5:02 p.m. in West Englewood, Sweeney said. He told police he was walking in the 1600 block of West 72nd Street when he heard shots and felt a pain in his back. He was taken to Stroger Hospital with a gunshot wound to the back and his condition was stabilized.

Sunday morning, three people were shot within a hour in separate incidents.

The first shooting happened at about 10:05 a.m. in the 6800 block of South Morgan Street in Englewood, Sweeney said. According to preliminary reports, a 16-year-old boy suffered a graze wound to his head and was taken to Stroger, where his condition was stabilized.

At about 10:25 a.m., another 16-year-old boy was shot while riding in a van in Fernwood on the Far South Side. That shooting happened in the 10600 block of South LaSalle Street. The boy suffered a gunshot wound to the chest and was hospitalized.

At about 10:44 a.m., a 20-year-old man was shot in East Garfield Park Square.

Firefighters injured in extra-alarm blaze

Chicago Tribune

Two firefighters were trapped in an extra-alarm fire at a residential building in Bridgeport on Sunday, but escaped with minor injuries.

Fire crews were called to the scene in the 2900 block of South Lyman Street about 2:30 p.m., according to Police News Affairs.

WGN-TV video from the scene showed firefighters on stretchers, being removed to ambulances but apparently awake and alert. WGN-TV was told that the two were taken to hospitals for observation.

Firefighters who were inside trying to put out the blaze were ordered to leave the building when fire began spreading up the interiors of the building's walls, Chicago Fire Commissioner Jose Santiago told reporters at the scene.

"As soon as the firefighter officer spotted that, they start to ... do a quick, organized removal, but the fire was moving too fast, and that's how they got trapped," Santiago said.

Residents of the home told WGN-TV that they were able to escape the building with the help of relatives.

ILLEGAL, NOT OUT OF OPTIONS

How one undocumented student pays for college

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

Zitlalli Roman has a job, an internship and an eye on getting a master's degree—maybe even a Ph.D. What she doesn't have is a Social Security number.

Roman, a 24-year-old Northeastern Illinois University student, immigrated to the Chicago area from Mexico City illegally when she was 16. When she was accepted at Harper Community College in Palatine, she said, her undocumented status wasn't an issue until the payment question came up.

"They didn't have a problem to enroll me or anything like that," she said. "It was just for the money."

Undocumented students may legally attend college in Illinois. Paying for it is the real hurdle. Without legal residency status, they cannot get federal student aid, including federal loans, Pell Grants or work-study money.

So for the past few years, Roman's life has been a constant process of finding scholarships, applying and crossing her fingers. Each one, she said, takes at least six hours, not including the time it takes to get her transcript.

"I go to the scholarship office, I would say, once a week or once every two weeks, just to keep me in the loop," she said. "But honestly, it's just too much. Working 10 hours [a week] is not that much, then 16 hours in my internship and five classes. I also have homework. I'm in the process of applying for grad school. ... There are times I do not sleep. I am not a normal person."

Illinois is more welcoming than some states; qualifying undocumented students can pay in-state tuition, and the Illinois DREAM Act established a private scholarship fund for qualified students without legal immigration status. Roman received a DREAM scholarship last year.

In addition, some colleges are taking action to support undocumented students. Roman said NEIU, where she transferred after getting her associate's degree at Harper, has been particularly welcoming.

"I was able to meet the scholarship coordinator ... and I told her my situation," she said. "She was like, 'You're not alone. There are so many [undocumented] students here, and we have resources.'"

PHILIP DEMBINSKI FOR REDEYE

The University of Chicago's website states that "all students who apply, regardless of citizenship, are considered for admission and for every type of private financial aid that the University offers." Student government officials at Loyola are in the process of creating a scholarship fund specifically for undocumented students.

Roman's scholarships have covered most of her college costs; the rest, she has paid for by working as a machine operator at a suburban factory. Even though she cannot work legally in the U.S., she said she has always been able to find a job.

That might get harder once she graduates; she cannot be licensed in her chosen field—social work—without legal residency status.

But her openness about being undocumented has helped her in unexpected ways, she said.

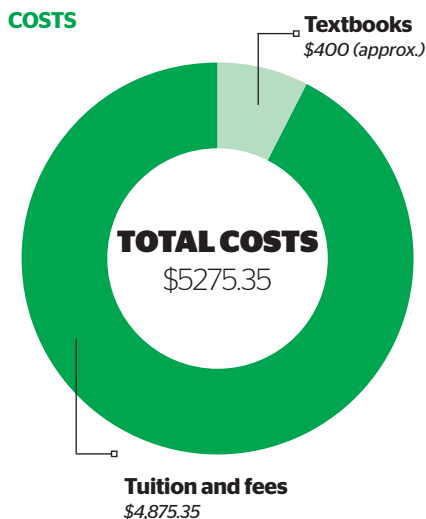

"I feel like the scholarships and this money would not be here if I had not come out [as undocumented], if I had not told people up front, 'I am undocumented, but I am worth it, this is why I should get funding, this is why I should get help, and I will not let you down.'"

Conjoined twins Knatalye Hope (front) and Adeline Faith Mata

Conjoined twins to take first step to separation surgery

1 Conjoined 6-month-old twin girls will begin to undergo tissue expansion this month to stretch skin that will be used to cover patches of their bodies when they are separated in a surgery planned for December.

The tissue expansion for Knatalye Hope and Adeline Faith Mata is expected to take six to eight weeks. The girls are joined at the abdomen and share a liver, diaphragm, pelvis, intestines and the lining of the heart.

"When I think about December I get that sick feeling in my stomach. I want to know how much pain they are going to feel after. What is it going to be like for them?" said their mother, Elysse Mata.

"They are where they should be developmentally. They reach up for toys, they reach out for us when we get close and talk to them," she said.

The girls were born via cesarean section and will be separated at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston by a team of surgeons.

Texas health worker contracts Ebola

2 A Texas health worker has contracted Ebola after treating a Liberian who died of the disease in Dallas last week, raising concern about how U.S. medical guidelines aimed at stopping the spread of the disease were breached.

Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas, where the new case was announced Sunday, has already faced criticism for its management of the infection.

The infected worker, a woman who was not named, is the first person to contract the disease in the United States. She had close and frequent contact during the 11-day treatment of Thomas Eric Duncan, who died Wednesday, health officials said.

The current Ebola outbreak is the worst outbreak on record and has killed more than 4,000 people, mostly in West Africa's Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea. Duncan, a Liberian, was exposed to Ebola in his home country and developed the disease while visiting the U.S.

The new case prompted President Obama to order federal authorities to take additional steps to ensure the American medical system is prepared to follow correct protocols in dealing with Ebola, the White House said Sunday.

There was no word yet how the health worker was infected, but the director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said it indicated a professional lapse that may have caused other health workers at the hospital to be infected as well.

"We don't know what occurred in the care of the index patient, the original patient, in Dallas, but at some point there was a breach in protocol, and that breach in protocol resulted in this infection," CDC director Thomas Frieden told a news conference.

Hospital officials said the worker had been wearing CDC-recommended protective gear during treatment, including gowns, gloves, masks and shields.

"We are evaluating other potential health care worker exposures because if this individual was exposed, which they were, it is possible that other individuals were exposed," Frieden said.

BOSTON MAN NOT INFECTED

A man in Massachusetts who was being evaluated at a Boston hospital for a possible Ebola infection does not appear to have the deadly disease, officials at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center said Sunday night.

Tests by the CDC confirmed the patient had been infected with Ebola.

A federal judge Sunday ruled that Alaska's ban on same-sex marriage was unconstitutional. The judge also barred Alaska from refusing to acknowledge lawful same-sex marriages conducted in other states.

Cutler and the Bears get back on top in Atlanta after a two-game losing streak

By Jay St. Pierre | REDEYE

The Bears should think about rescheduling their remaining six homes games this season. After winning two of their first three on the road to open this year, Chicago turned on the jets against the Falcons in the Georgia Dome to snap a two-game losing streak.

Jay Cutler led the charge, throwing for 381 yards and one score, but it was the defense (which held Atlanta to 287 yards) that came out swinging. Sacks late in the fourth and an interception to seal the game were what the Bears needed to hand Atlanta its third consecutive loss. Let's take a look at how it all went down. ### FIRST QUARTER

Ten minutes into the game and everyone's favorite rookie Kyle Fuller forces Julio Jones to fumble the ball. Jones recovers it, but the play reinforces the fact that Fuller is not human and offers better coverage against receivers than a State Farm agent. Fuller for President ... or at least Illinois governor!

Falcons linebacker Paul Worrlow (above) blasts through the line with five seconds left in the quarter and hits Cutler so hard his head slams on turf. Would have been fine and dandy, had the refs not blown the whistle prior to the ball being snapped. Shame on you, Paulie. Go in the corner and think about your actions.

Twitter blows up at the end of the quarter with calls for Bears lineman Jordan Mills' head. He committed two first quarter penalties that overturned big plays. He wasn't done for the day, either. The Falcon's make him look like a junior college dropout toward the end of the half as they blitz their way past Mills to force an awkward throw from Cutler. (More on that in a minute)

Score: Atlanta 3, Bears 0

SECOND QUARTER

Fox keeps showing Brandon Marshall writing in this little book. While I originally believed he was writing the script to the third “Bridget Jones’ Diary,” the sideline reporter comes on and says it’s a positive thoughts journal that Marshall uses to keep himself thinking happy thoughts. He’s got a lot to be happy about as he ends the half with five receptions for 100 yards.

Cutler dumps off a short TD pass to Josh Morgan (above, second from left) with six minutes left in the half. It’s Morgan’s first score of the year. His celebration is lackluster, to say the least, but that’s probably because it’s the first time he reached the end zone since December 2012.

This game just keeps getting uglier. The Bears drive nearly 90 yards in the last four minutes but can’t score a TD. The Falcons bull rush Mills, and force a right-handed Cutler to try to make a throw with his left hand. Good news for Bears fans is the left-handed toss look better than anything backup Jimmy Clausen has thrown in his career. Gould saves the drive by hitting a short field goal.

Score: Bears 13, Atlanta 3

THIRD QUARTER

Safety Chris Conte (right) goes down after hitting Julio Jones. He makes it to the sideline, but soon heads to the locker room and doesn’t return to the game. This is the fourth game this season that Conte, who doctors later say is made of glass, hasn’t finished.

Falcons quarterback Matt Ryan dumps it off to Antone Smith, who takes it 41-yards for the touchdown. The guy came into the game averaging 26 yards per reception. You would think the Bears would have game planned for him. His four catches for 64 yards and a score on the day say otherwise.

Holy smokes! The Bears are turning this around!!! Alshon Jeffery (left) catches a 74 yard pass from Cutler and drags safety Kemal Ishmael nearly 15 yards after the catch. He’s stopped short of the end zone, but Forte scores on the next play. Would have been a perfect drive for the Bears if it weren’t for the Falcons blocking the extra point. It was the first time Atlanta blocked an extra point since 2003.

Score: Bears 19, Atlanta 13

BEARS BRAIN TEASER

Every week, RedEye challenges skills you thought were useless once you left elementary school. For Week 6, we asked:

If Hester were to run from Soldier Field to the Georgia Dome via Interstate 65 South (according to Mapquest, rounding to nearest hundred), how many times over would he have to run the distance of all his returns for touchdowns? Round to the nearest whole number.

Answer: 727 times

How we got there: Hester’s returns for touchdowns, including the Super Bowl, including the Super Bowl, cover 1,695 yards, or 5,085 feet. According to Mapquest and rounding to the nearest hundred, the Georgia Dome is 700 miles (3,696,000 feet) from Soldier Field via I-65 South. Divide 3,696,000 and you get 727 times (rounded up from 726.8).

THANKS TO ALL WHO ENTERED. WE’LL UNVEIL THE WINNER VIA TWITTER ON MONDAY. LOOK FOR THE NEXT CHALLENGE FRIDAY!

FOURTH QUARTER

Jeffery is called for “illegal touching” following a score five minutes into the quarter. Doesn’t matter, Forte (above) takes the ball from nine yards out on the next play to score. A two-point conversion catch by Martellus Bennett puts the Bears in front of the Falcons by 14 points. You can almost hear Bennett yell, “YOU CAN BLOCK EXTRA POINTS BUT NO ONE CAN BLOCK ME!” as he celebrates.

Jared Allen records his first sack of the season, throwing Ryan down to the turf like a rag doll. Atlanta calls a timeout, and all you hear on the TV is fans chanting, “Let’s go Bears! Let’s go Bears!” I keep seeing these anti-Pat Quinn commercials saying Illinois has lost millions of job under “The Jobs Governor’s” tenure. I’m starting to think all of these jobs moved to Atlanta—taking thousands of Bears fans with them.

Demontre Hurst picks off Matt Ryan with 3:37 remaining in the game. It’s the first interception Ryan has thrown at home this season. Coincidentally, it’s also the first time any Bears fan has heard of Hurst.

Final: Chicago 27, Atlanta 13

SIDE NOTES

Forte rushes for 7,000

OK, that’s a little deceptive, but Forte eclipsed the 7,000 yard rushing mark in the first quarter. Shortly after the run, the Bears tweeted that he was the 20th player in NFL history with 7,000 rushing and 3,000 receiving yards. Way to go, buddy!

So you think you can dance?

Willie Young and Allen certainly think they can. The two partook in some sort of dance-off after they combined for a fourth-quarter sack. While we can’t speak for Allen’s future in the dance world, Young may have a career post-football if he works on that fish reeling thing he was doing.

1	Why is Doug McDermott playing so many minutes for the Bulls?	Are you going to give the ball to Solomon Jones?	As a rookie with limited time under Thibodeau, he still has all of the original cartilage in his knees.	Coach Thibbs is getting him ready for all those regular season minutes he won't be getting.	McDermott must be the "straight man" in the comedy act known as the "Mirotic Show."	I don't know. But I love the fact that Bulls fans think DOUG MCDERMOTT is going to be a factor. Makes me LOL.
2	Where is all this Kansas City Royals magic coming from?	Bret Saberhagen. That's a funny last name. Almost as funny as George Brett talking about crapping his pants.	The bedroom, right? That's where people are always saying the magic happens.	Ned Yost has a pocket full of pixie dust and has been thinking happy thoughts about his bullpen.	The magic comes from their stadium's magic waterfall. I mean, dang, they paid enough for that thing.	It's like when you don't hook up with a girl for a long time and then get the opportunity. They may not last long, so to speak.
3	The Blackhawks are 2-0. How long can they keep this up?	Please see 2010. And, then please see 2013.	Forever. And don't you dare say otherwise.	Not sure but I hear they have a pill for that.	As long as RedEye keeps Elliott Serrano from messing with his early playoff beard.	Coach Q's mustache cured polio in 1952. Let's be honest, it can do anything.
4	Which college football team is making you a believer this season?	Lady on the Dome. Get Rudy on the hotline. Tell Joe Montana we need the soup! Touchdown Jesus. This is it, baby!	The Faber College Mongols.	Oh man, any team that beats Florida State so Ernest can move on with his life ... love you E.	"Flim, flam, bim bam, Ole Miss, by damn!"	Michigan State University looks like a pretty solid pick. Either them or the University of Michi—hahahahahahaha.
5	If the Cubs signing Edwin Jackson was a mistake, what else have they gotten wrong?	Hm, do we have enough space? We haven't won since 1908! Do you get it? 1-9-0-8! That's BEFORE the first World War!	Allowing Ronnie Woo Woo to be their unofficial mascot.	Building Wrigley Field on an Indian burial ground was the second worst thing.	Oh, about the last 106 years.	"What is everything, Alex?"

Kenyan runner Rita Jeptoo defended her title Sunday at the 2014 Bank of America Chicago Marathon, and she gave herself a new title too.

"I'm the queen of Chicago," Jeptoo, 33, proclaimed.

Jeptoo broke free from a pack of four women, who had stuck together through much of the race, at Mile 23.

Jeptoo has won four straight marathons.

Ethiopia's Mare Dibaba finished second in 2:25:37, and Kenya's Florence Kiplagat finished third in 2:25:57.

Twenty minutes before Jeptoo crossed the finish line, Eliud Kipchoge won the men's race in 2 hours, 4 minutes, 11 seconds.

Kipchoge led a Kenyan sweep of the podium. Sammy Kitwara was second in 2:04:28, with Dickson Chumba third in 2:04:32.

Illinois' Tatyana McFadden won the women's wheelchair race in 1:44:50. Joshua George, also of Illinois, won the men's wheelchair race in 1:32:12. TRIBUNE, REUTERS

Sitting pretty, near the top

Notre Dame sits at No. 5 in both the coaches' and Associated Press polls Sunday after its 50-43 win over North Carolina while Florida State, the Irish's opponent Saturday, dropped from No. 1 to No. 2. Mississippi State is the new No. 1 in both polls, jumping five spots in the coaches poll and two in the AP poll (capping off the fastest rise to the top in the AP poll's history, according to ESPN) after beating previous No. 2 Auburn on Saturday. TRIBUNE

Passing history

Peyton Manning is just two touchdown passes away from reaching Brett Favre's career record of 508. The older half of the "Football on Your Phone" crew threw three TD passes Sunday, leading the Broncos to a 31-17 win over the Jets. Manning's next chance to tie or break Favre's record comes next Sunday, against San Francisco.

THE MOUTHWATCH

"I think the injury's a positive thing that has helped him develop the jump shot and, I think, the different gears because once he gets it in six [gear] he's hard to stop. And being able to change the pace makes him dangerous, that more talented, I think."

THEIR FUTURE IS NOW

The number of finalists in each category that will be selected to present their big ideas at an official event at Chop House on Nov. 14.

and online presence. Chicagoans would receive help with resumes, cover letters, typing, computer classes and professional business clothing.

- Smith's big idea was sparked by the February 2011 blizzard. "I was stuck inside, and decided to reach out to my social media followers, to see if anyone wanted to send me their resume for help. ... I received a great response, and was encouraged by some to see how I could do this for a living."
- Though she's lived here most of her life, Smith would spend a free day in Chicago exploring its diverse neighborhoods. "Visiting the National Hellenic Museum in Greektown, checking out a Pakistani restaurant on Devon Street and trying a new cuisine in Chinatown are just a few things I would like to do," she said.

FOOD AND DRINK

JACKELYNNE YBARRA AND JOHN FLORES

A healthy, authentic Mexican taquito stand

» Flores and Ybarra's idea is rooted in his dining experience as a kid. "My fiancée and I didn't grow up with much money. The fast food that would occasionally be used as dinner due to parents working full time, wasn't always the healthiest," he said.

» A mentorship would "take us to that next level," Flores said. "I know we have a great idea, and great food, and we excel at sales and service, but the nuts and bolts of running a fast food spot is nothing we've ever done."

ERIC STEIN

Enlightened Flavors frozen dessert company

The first product, Chakra Sorbet, is a line of seven premium sorbets made from fruit purees and created with functional ingredients to enhance chakra balancing.

» While Enlightened started with sorbet, Stein says the big picture is "an international brand with multiple product lines including sorbet, ice cream sandwiches, soft serve, hard ice cream, frozen [ice pops] and boozy slush."

» Stein is a chef as well as a registered dietician. "My personal mission is to nourish the body, mind and spirit," he said.

NICOLE TRIEBE

Windy City Dinner Fairy: Home-delivered, healthy meals featuring restaurant-quality food

» Family played a big role in Triebe's idea: She cooked a week's worth of reheatable healthy meals for her sister-in-law, who was in the midst of her law school exams. "She was so grateful, she deemed me her 'Dinner Fairy,'" Triebe said.

» As an ex-collegiate swimmer, Triebe says she is "very familiar with putting the right foods in your body to help you perform at your highest level."

RICKIE PEREZ

Logan Oyster Socials

A traveling oyster bar food truck and, eventually, a Logan Square-based oyster bar

» Perez, who runs the oyster bar at the Mariano's in Ravenswood, says that Chicago's landlocked status has limited its selection of seafood. "Bringing the highest possible quality oysters to your doorstep, backyard, wedding or house party is what Logan Oyster Socials is all about," he said.

» Before enjoying a day alone in Chicago, Perez would first make sure it's not the rapture or zombie apocalypse. "I would lock myself in Emporium Arcade bar with the essentials: a deep-dish pizza from Lou Malnati's, a dipped Italian beef from Al's Beef, a horchata from Dos Amigos and a couple of six packs of Revolution Anti-Hero ... and hope that everyone would return the next day," he said.

CEDRIC COMBS, OWEN MEYER AND CHRIS LINDSEY

Liquor Lab: A traveling mixology club that hosts unique, pop-up events

» Still curious about how Liquor Lab works? It's best described as "a really souped-up mixology version of NEXT with a start-up, grassroots edge ... We change locations and menus every time and we get guest feedback from each event," Meyer said.

» Ideally, Meyer said, the group wants to expand Liquor Lab to four to five major U.S. markets and "show consumers that there is an experience that sits head and shoulders above your everyday 'nightlife/restaurant/going out' options."

JENNA DOUGLAS

525 Executive Sweets

A bakery and food truck that creates customized branded sweets for businesses or social events. Clients can create their own flavor blends and toppers.

» Douglas said her love of baking comes from her grandmother. "Watching her create delicious sweets in the kitchen as a child had an impact on my decision to become a baker," she said.

» Don't expect to find Douglas roaming the streets on her big day off in Chicago. "I would bake!" she said.

ARTS AND DESIGN

ERIN DIEHL

Corporate teambuilding workshops from professionally trained improvisers. The group will donate 20 percent to charity.

» Diehl wants others to experience the professional improvement she found through improv comedy at The Second City. "I was more open, more honest, lived more in-the-moment and was also louder ... if that's even possible!" she said.

» Diehl is a high-energy, social person who even brought her sense of humor to her dog's name. "I am married to an awesome dude with a RAD last name, and we live in Lakeview with our 7-pound toy poodle, BIGG Diehl," she said.

MICHAEL FOX

Monthly art events with themes, concepts and artwork selected by real Chicagoans. Exhibitions will be chosen through a Web application where users can submit their own ideas or upvote other users' submissions.

» As a grad student at School of the Art Institute of Chicago, Fox said he's "noticed a disconnect between contemporary art and the public's ability to relate to it." But that being said, "the actual idea came from conversations with friends, probably after winning the gold trophy during a 'Super Mario Kart' session."

» And yes, he has a sense of humor about his name. "I'm Michael J. Fox. I predict the Cubs will win the World Series in 2015," he said.

KYLE EERTMOED

Handiemail: A handwriting service that turns your typed letters into a handwritten product—no fake script fonts allowed.

» Though Handiemail sounds a lot like Joaquin Phoenix's job in "Her," Eertmoed came up with the idea in 2012. "At first, it started as a joke. ... And then I started getting orders," he said. Now he employs 11 trained "scribes."

» Eertmoed says he's never had a true mentorship, and that's something he craves more than anything. "To me, this is just as valuable as getting funding," he said.

CHRISTOPHER BREILER

A bio-safe phone/tablet case equipped with a storage space for disinfecting wipes that can be used to wipe the phone down, as well as an embedded antimicrobial screen squeegee.

» While driving to work with his wife one day, Breiler realized that the city is pretty gross. "The defining moment was when I dropped my phone on the bathroom floor of a public restroom and really had no way of cleaning it off effectively," he said.

» Breiler's free day in Chicago would involve sports, sports and more sports. "Alone as in nobody else is in the city except for me? I would find a way into every stadium in Chicago so that I could shoot hoops at the United Center, cross the end zone at Soldier Field and attempt to knock one out of the park at Wrigley."

CORRINA CRADE AND PATRICK CUNNINGHAM

MogaMind: An "open-eyed meditation" program that combines the power of great music with meditative techniques and sports psychology.

» With MogaMind, Crade and Cunningham have a simple yet huge goal: 6 billion smiles. "From fulfillment, laughter, love, joy or any other positive effect, we want MogaMind to evolve with, and for, the public," they said.

» Crade and Cunningham bring different things to the MogaMind table; she's a creative producer who moved to Chicago three years ago with a blow-up mattress and a bottle of wine, he's a perpetual people person who likes to high-five strangers while jogging in Wicker Park.

RAPHAEL BARREDA AND MATT MUR

A content incubator for YouTube video producers, featuring a soundstage, editing suites and equipment as well as technical assistance and workshops » Barreda and Mur see an opportunity for Chicago to catch up to L.A. in the content-creation realm.

"From improvisers to community organizations there are a plethora of individuals and groups who have something to teach, something to say and something to share," Barreda said.

- » You think you've got big plans for a free day in Chicago? This is just the start for Barreda and Mur: "Dressed in our finest tuxedos and equipped with our film gear, our day starts with a bike ride on the lakefront for sunrise, followed by a brisk Jet Ski ride through the Chicago River," Barreda said.

SARA SEIBT

Darling: A website and app that helps potential adopters find the perfect shelter pet

» Darling is the perfect business for Chicago, Seibt said, because every animal deserves an equal chance at adoption. "Within Chicagoland there are so many shelters big and small, each with their own different resources, and whose reach only goes so far," she said.

- » Seibt's weekend hobbies aren't just pet-focused. "I dig comedy, challenging the status quo and dancing. Watch out for my Dougies!" she said.

ANDREW SCARPELLI

A public biology lab where "average Chicagoans can try answering simple questions they run into and have the guidance to turn their big ideas in biotechnology into reality"

- » Contrary to what you might think, Scarpelli says biotechnology is for everyone. "You want to know if your California roll is real crab? You should have access to a PCR to determine the DNA in that mystery meat. You want to make fine art with bacteria or fungi? You should have access to incubators and bacterial cultures," he said.

» Scarpelli is finishing his Ph.D. program, but still finds time to be active outside the lab. "I really enjoy being involved in my community, so I'm a volunteer at Science Club in the Boys and Girls Club in Uptown and a core organizer of the Chiditard," he said.

SAMANTHA WILEY

A portable cleansing mat for pets that removes toxins from their paws before entering a home

» After rescuing her first puppy last year, Wiley, who describes herself as a

"slight germophobe," was concerned about what might end up on her pet's paws. "It's no different than if humans walked around barefoot on dirty city streets, didn't shower for weeks on end, then walked all over the furniture and crawled into the same bed night after night."

- » "One of my favorite parts of this city is how warm and friendly people are. I absolutely love meeting and learning things from those I meet and exploring new places around town with my pup." His name? Sergeant Willie Toots McGee.

BUNDO ONWUEME

Flight Recon: An app that lets air travelers reschedule missed and delayed flights. It will automatically search for the next available seat to increase airport efficiency.

» Onwueme realized Flight

Recon needed to be created when experiencing his own flight delay, causing him to miss his connection to Brazil for the World Cup.

- » Onwueme says that he is very personable, jovial and enjoys contributing to his community. "I am an avid soccer player, enjoy playing my guitar and learning other languages: Italian, French, Spanish and Yoruba," he said.

KARL STELTENPOHL AND FRANK POPE

GoReturnMe: A line of "reward if found" labels and keytags for phones, keys, wallets, devices, pets, etc., featuring a serial number that can be registered online.

» Steltenpohl and Pope aren't great at keeping track of their stuff. "We are the type of people that lose things; I can't even tell you how many hoodies, coats and iPhones I have donated to the bar scene and venues in Chicago over the years," they said.

- » The two are surprised that the idea of reward-based incentive isn't more popular in the Internet age. "Everybody can help everybody," they said.

KIMBERLY LUCIO

A wedding website that aggregates vendors from across Chicago, basically a one-stop shop for planning your wedding.

» Lucio says her site could be especially helpful for smaller vendors. "There are plenty of small businesses that have their work eclipsed based on larger websites that have more funding. We need to find a way to give the most qualified vendors a fighting chance," she said.

- » Her plans for a free day in Chicago are pretty straightforward. "Knowing me, I'd probably eat a ton of frozen yogurt and try to find Derrick Rose," she said.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

A love relationship might suddenly spring to life, even if you've been single since the Ice Age. A romance that was going sour could seem fresh and new again. You can thank Venus and Mercury for bringing healing.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

The sun is warning you to play fair. Don't cheat on your partner and lie about it. Avoid spreading toxic gossip even if you fantasize about sabotaging somebody else's relationship.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You'll want to party all the time as the moon increases your need for fun. Put yourself in settings where smart, cultured and sexy people gather. Avoid biker bars, hoodlums and golf courses.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You could be wondering what is really going on in your love life. Is your girlfriend loyal? Are you going to remain happy with your husband, or will you tire of him? A moon opposition says don't panic.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You'll be on fire as a group of planets bring you extra energy. You could entertain friends with outrageous stories at a dinner party or amuse all of your co-workers with your comedic routines. Mercury is helping you communicate in clever ways.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Don't stir up trouble just because you're bored. It's not a good idea to call up a former flame and schedule a hookup. And it isn't smart to get back together with that dysfunctional ex. The moon urges you to get real.

Aries March 21-April 19

Three major planets opposite your sign are turning you into a major crankypants. Nothing is going your way and you're running out of patience. Ask your partner for a relaxing massage and chill out.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Be open to changing directions. The moon is encouraging you to shift gears. If you're dating two people and you've been thinking that one of them is "Mr. Right," maybe you've got it backward.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You could receive praise and adoration when you least expect it. A powerful moon is beaming good vibes. At last, that gorgeous professor will compliment your writing skills.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Sometimes you need to lead with your brain and not with your heart. You might feel affection toward someone, but this person could be otherwise engaged. The sun says wait and let him or her sort things out with a former flame.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

As a free spirited Fire sign, you hate rules, schedules and restrictions. But this week Saturn is forcing you to stay within a framework.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Don't make any sudden moves, even if you're desperate to make a change. Mercury is creating some restlessness and you probably feel like you need to give an ultimatum. Bad idea.

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» @TribLuis

Media was invited last month to meet with the casts of NBC's "Chicago Fire" and "Chicago PD" at Cinespace Film Studios on the Near West Side and take a bus tour of some filming locations. The six-hour experience was informative and included stops at the fire station, police department, hospital and bar (Lottie's Pub) seen on the shows.

If both series last even half as long as fellow Dick Wolf-produced drama "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit," (now in its 16th season), they really should consider making a similar tour open to the public. For now, I give you a "Chicago Fire"-focused glimpse of the tour: Here are seven things I learned during my set visit.

1 Fans of "Chicago Fire" want to see the fictional Firehouse 51 from the show, which is actually real-life fire station Engine 18 on the Near West side. Chicago Fire Department Deputy District Chief Steve Chikerotis serves as a consultant on "Chicago Fire" and estimates the show films there 22 times a year. "We have people come from all over the world" on weekends, Chikerotis said.

Outside Firehouse 51, aka Engine 18

2 The most common complaint firefighters have about "Chicago Fire" is the smoke—or lack thereof. "Our world that we work in, we have 1,300-degree temperatures at the ceiling, every fire we go to," Chikerotis said. "But we also have zero visibility, which would make for great radio, but not television. I think [firefighters] get it, that ["Chicago Fire"] can't show the blackness of reality on a television show."

3 Star Taylor Kinney claimed he wasn't sure if girlfriend Lady Gaga would make a "Chicago Fire" cameo any time soon. "I wouldn't know, you'd have to ask her," Kinney said. Last year Wolf told a Los Angeles morning show that he'd like to see Gaga appear on the show. Would Kinney like to see it happen as well? "I wouldn't mind, no."

4 Kinney filmed a movie with Bill Murray over the summer. "It's called 'Rock the Kasbah,'" Kinney said. "The first day of work there, I had a scene where [Murray] is dressed in drag. My character walks in and sees him and we just started ad-libbing. I had a tough time keeping it together without laughing."

5 The cast rides motorcycles around Chicago. "As often as I can, I put my helmet on so nobody knows it's me, and I ride about the city," said Eamonn Walker, who plays Chief Wallace Boden.

6 The extras who play firefighters are actual firefighters. "They bring their own gear," said "Chicago Fire" and "Chicago PD" co-creator Michael Brandt. "They do hoses. ... We do everything we can to include them."

7 Chikerotis said it was a Chicago firefighter who invented the sliding pole. Producers wanted a sliding pole in the series, despite the fact Engine 18 is a one-story building. They made it seem like Firehouse 51 was two stories in the series premiere and showed Charlie Barnett sliding.

MAY THE FORCE BE WITH YOU, CARRIE

Looks like Princess Leia needs a little help remembering her lines these days. Carrie Fisher, who is returning to that galaxy far, far away for the upcoming "Star Wars: Episode VII," said at a Beverly Hills event last month she has trouble keeping her script straight. "There's no way unless you put cards and stuff or write the lines on my hand," Fisher told The Hollywood Reporter at the Golden Heart Awards gala Sept. 30, which the actress attended with her French bulldog Gary as her plus-one. It's probably those signature hair buns. They're interfering with her brain functions.

Submitted for your approval

Don't even act like you don't still have nightmares about the Ghastly Grinner. Or the three old hag ghosts in The Tale of Watcher's Woods. We still can't talk about that creepypass little dead girl trapped in the mirror. Perhaps if we could rewatch those old episodes of SNICK classic "Are you Afraid of the Dark?" now as adults, they wouldn't be nearly as terrifying as we remember. Turns out, now we can—and turns out, of course, they're even scarier. Just in time for Halloween, one dedicated Reddit user has uploaded almost every episode of the '90s fright fest to YouTube, eonline.com reports. So hope you're ready, fellow Midnight Society wannabes. Good luck making it past the possessed doll in the opening credits.

Um, can we get on that invite list?
